Royal Health Care LLC Completes Rigorous SAS 70 Type II Audit of PEGASYS and HMA Managed Care Applications

NEW YORK, New York – January 23, 2009

Royal Health Care (“Royal”), a leading health care technology and services company, has completed an assessment from an independent auditing firm showing that Royal has the internal controls and safeguards necessary to support its managed care software applications, PEGASYS and HMA. This certification demonstrates Royal’s commitment to information security and reliability.

Royal commissioned the SAS 70 Level II independent review for existing operational controls within the Data Center to evaluate their effectiveness when applied to both software products. PEGASYS is Royal’s flexible payer claims processing system, and HMA is the innovative utilization and case management application that interfaces with PEGASYS. Currently these software products support payer transactions for over 8 million lives.

Steven J. Bory, Royal’s Chief Executive Officer, stated, “We hold our Data Center to stringent standards and requirements and the results of this audit demonstrate that we have data integrity and recovery controls in place for Royal’s clients”.

SAS 70 is an internationally recognized auditing standard developed by the Institute of Certified Public Accountants. The SAS 70 Level II audit examines control activities related to information technology including physical security, environmental security, computer operations, information security, application change control, data communications and HIPAA.

Cathy Weigle, Royal’s Vice President of Business Development and Client Services said, “We deliver high quality information technology services and business processing outsourcing services to our managed care clients. This assessment is an important benchmark for our clients to ensure that they can rely on the operations of our Data Center and the performance of our software products”.

In addition to its managed care software, Royal Health Care also performs a full range of payer outsourcing services such as claims administration, utilization management, call center services, and fulfillment services.
